Growth of Vietnam's Capital Market

The continuous expansion of Vietnam's stock market and the increasing number of retail investors are expected to support higher trading liquidity and stronger demand for brokerage, investment, and financial services. Vietnam's potential upgrade to emerging market status may attract stronger foreign capital inflows, increasing trading activity and creating more opportunities for leading securities firms such as SSI.

Expansion of Institutional and Margin Lending Services

Ho Chi Minh City Securities Corporation continues strengthening institutional brokerage, margin lending, and investment banking activities to diversify revenue streams and improve competitiveness.

Strong Financial Capacity and Development Strategy

HCM's strong reputation in research quality and institutional services provides a competitive advantage in attracting long-term clients and expanding its market position.

Market position

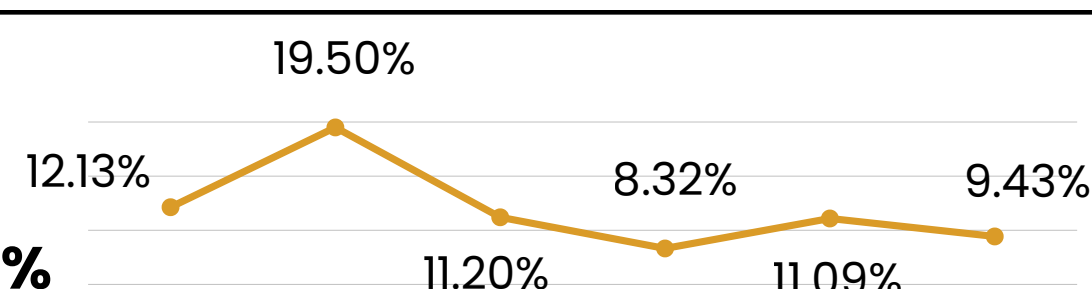

Ho Chi Minh City Securities Corporation is one of the top 5 securities companies in Vietnam in terms of reputation and capital scale, with a strong focus on institutional clients and professional brokerage services. The company maintains a brokerage market share of around 6.52% on the HOSE exchange and is consistently recognized as one of the leading brokers for institutional investors.

In the derivatives market, HCM ranks among the top firms with approximately 7.81% market share, placing third nationwide. The company was also recognized as the No.1 Securities Brokerage Firm in Frontier Markets in the prestigious Extel Survey rankings. In addition, HCM is known for its strong financial foundation and disciplined risk management model, relying less on aggressive "zero-fee" competition strategies compared to many peer

During the 2020–2025 period, Ho Chi Minh City Securities Corporation recorded cyclical but relatively stable financial performance, reflecting fluctuations in Vietnam's stock market conditions. Revenue growth surged strongly in 2020–2021, reaching 44.08% and 98.41%, respectively, driven by booming market liquidity and investor participation. However, revenue declined during 2022–2023 as trading activity weakened before recovering again in 2024–2025 with growth rates of 47.30% and 20.11%.

Net Profit After Tax increased from VND 530 billion in 2020 to a peak of VND 1,147 billion in 2021, then moderated during the market correction phase before recovering to VND 1,179 billion in 2025. ROEA and ROAA also declined from their 2021 peaks, reflecting lower profitability during weaker market periods, although profitability remained relatively stable compared to many peers. EPS rose strongly to VND 3,680/share in 2021 before gradually decreasing and stabilizing around VND 1,400–1,500/share in later years, indicating more balanced but slower earnings growth after the market boom.

RISK TOLERANCE

MEDIUM RISK

HCM has a medium risk profile compared to many securities firms due to its relatively conservative business strategy and stronger focus on risk management

However, the company remains highly sensitive to stock market volatility, trading liquidity, interest rate movements, and increasing industry competition, all of which can significantly affect short-term performance. In addition, the growing involvement of commercial banks in the securities sector creates stronger competition, as many securities companies are now backed by large banking groups with strong capital support, increasing pressure on independent firms like SSI.

TIME HORIZON

MEDIUM TERM INVESTMENT HORIZON

the company is expected to benefit from the structural growth of Vietnam's capital market. However, earnings may remain cyclical depending on stock market conditions and trading activity.
