Growth of Vietnam's Capital Market

The continuous expansion of Vietnam's stock market and the increasing number of retail investors are expected to support higher trading liquidity and stronger demand for brokerage, investment, and financial services. Vietnam's potential upgrade to emerging market status may attract stronger foreign capital inflows, increasing trading activity and creating more opportunities for leading securities firms such as SSI.

Expansion of Brokerage and Financial Services

SSI Securities Corporation continues expanding its brokerage market share while developing services such as margin lending, investment banking, wealth management, and asset management to diversify revenue sources and strengthen long-term growth.

Strong Financial Capacity and Development Strategy

SSI focuses on digital transformation, improving customer service quality, and expanding its financial services ecosystem. In addition, the company's strong financial foundation and leading brand position provide a significant competitive advantage in attracting clients and expanding business operations.

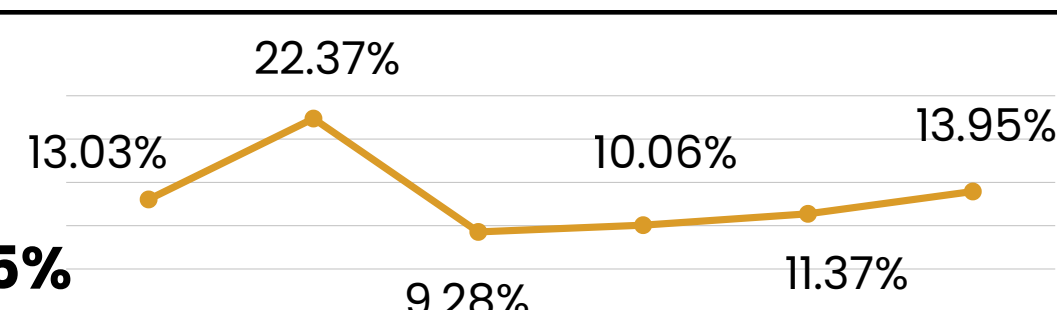

Market position

SSI Securities Corporation is one of the leading securities companies in Vietnam, established in 1999 with more than 25 years of experience in the financial and securities industry. The company has built a strong position in the market through its comprehensive business segments, including brokerage services, investment banking, asset management, treasury investment, and financial advisory services. SSI is also recognized as one of the largest securities firms in Vietnam in terms of market capitalization, brokerage market share, and financial capability. With a broad customer base, strong brand reputation, and extensive experience in the capital market, SSI continues to play an important role in the development of Vietnam's securities industry.

Financial performance

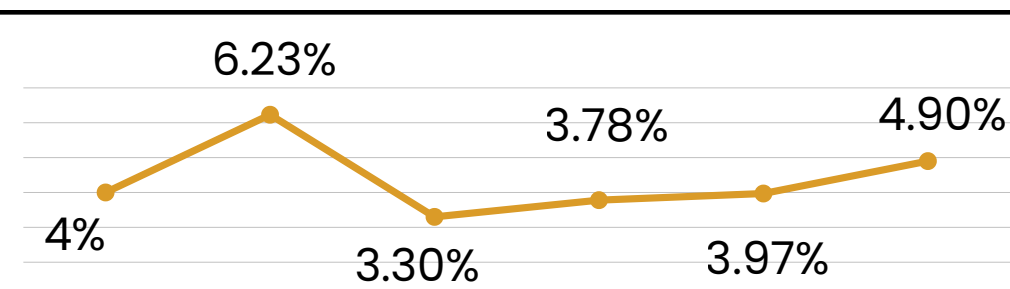

ROEA

ROAA

4% - 4.9%

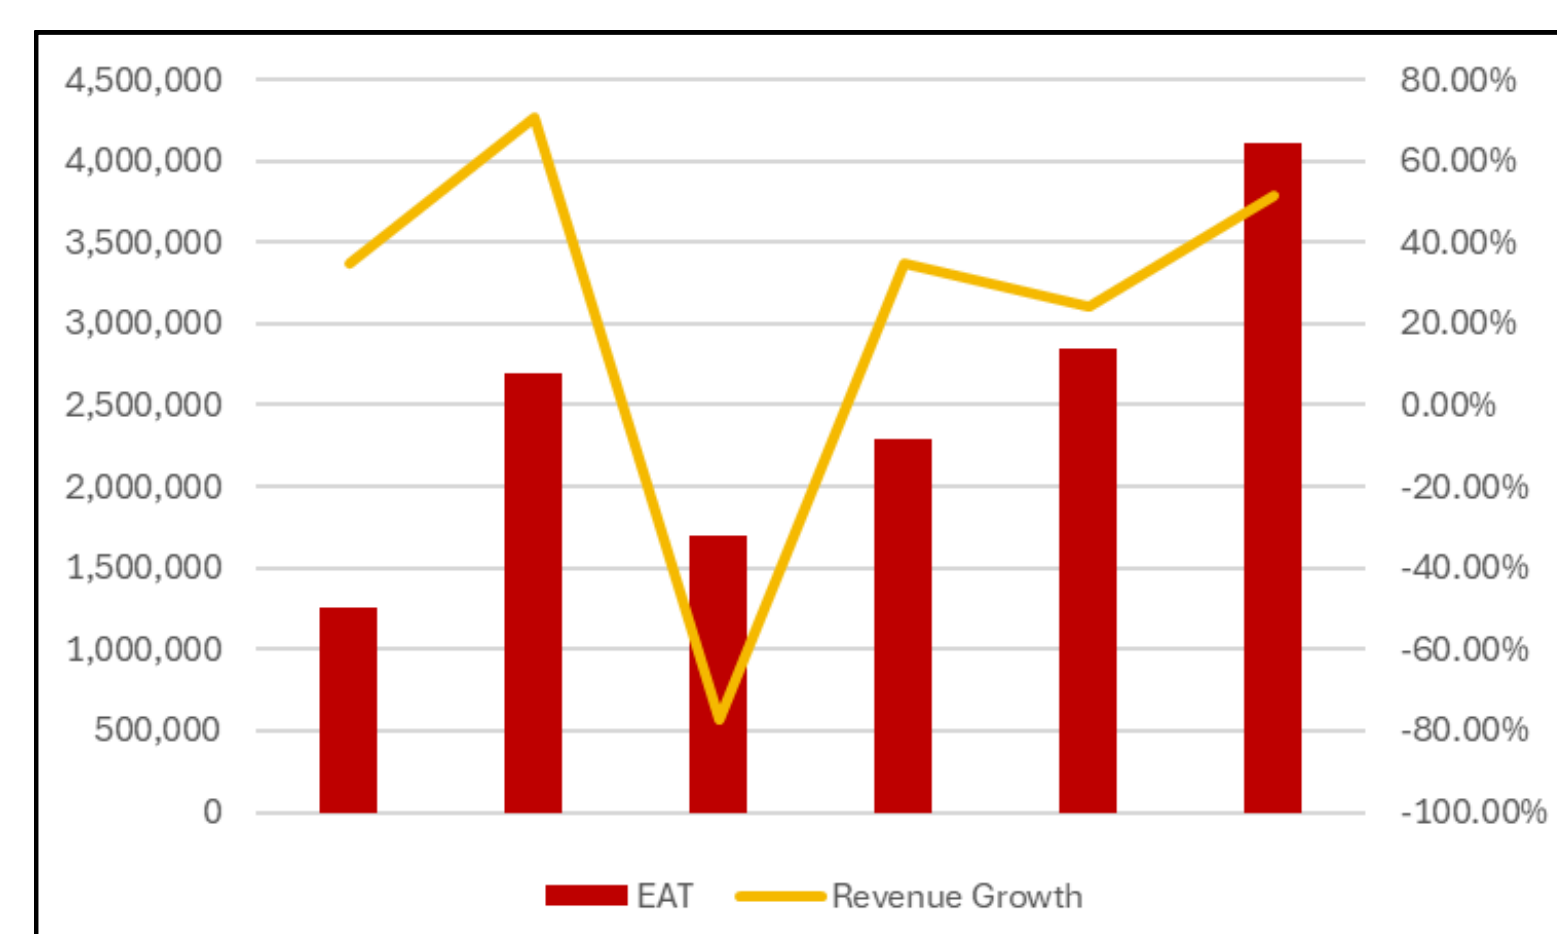

EPS

2,178 VND - 2,053 VND

During the 2020–2025 period, SSI Securities Corporation reflected a highly cyclical but recovering performance, closely tied to Vietnam's stock market liquidity and investor sentiment. The sharp revenue drop in 2022 (–77.17%) shows strong sensitivity to market downturns, while the strong recovery in 2023–2025 (+35.02%, +24%, +51.6%) indicates improving trading conditions and market participation.

Net Profit After Tax rose from VND 1,256 billion (2020) to VND 4,107 billion (2025), reflecting resilient earnings growth over the cycle. The improvement in ROEA (13.95%) and ROAA (4.90%) in 2025 shows better capital efficiency during the recovery phase, while EPS recovery to VND 2,053/share indicates stronger earnings per shareholder after a volatile period. Overall, the indicators show that SSI's performance is market-driven but structurally improving with Vietnam's capital market expansion.

RISK TOLERANCE

MEDIUM TO HIGH RISK

As a leading securities firm in Vietnam, SSI benefits from a high brokerage market share, a diversified financial services ecosystem, and strong capabilities in margin lending and investment banking, which support long-term revenue and profit growth.

However, the company remains highly sensitive to stock market volatility, trading liquidity, interest rate movements, and increasing industry competition, all of which can significantly affect short-term performance. In addition, the growing involvement of commercial banks in the securities sector creates stronger competition, as many securities companies are now backed by large banking groups with strong capital support, increasing pressure on independent firms like SSI.

TIME HORIZON

MEDIUM TERM INVESTMENT HORIZON

As a leading stock in the securities industry, SSI tends to achieve sustainable growth alongside the upward cycle of the economy and financial market. Holding the stock during this period allows investors to benefit from both capital gains and stable annual cash dividends.
