Growth of Vietnam’s Capital Market

The continuous expansion of Vietnam’s stock market and the increasing number of retail investors are expected to support higher trading liquidity and stronger demand for brokerage, investment, and financial services. Vietnam’s potential upgrade to emerging market status may attract stronger foreign capital inflows, increasing trading activity and creating more opportunities for leading securities firms such as VCI.

Growth of Investment Banking Activities

Vietcap Securities is expected to benefit from rising demand for IPOs, M&A transactions, and capital market fundraising activities as Vietnam’s financial market continues developing.

Expansion of Institutional and Wealth Management Services

The company continues strengthening its institutional brokerage, wealth management, and advisory services to diversify revenue streams and enhance long-term competitiveness.

Market position

Vietcap Securities is currently one of the leading securities firms in Vietnam, ranking Top 4 in brokerage market share on the HOSE exchange with approximately 7.35% market share. The company also maintains the number one position in the institutional brokerage segment, supported by its strong network of corporate and foreign clients. VCI is widely recognized as a major player in investment banking (IB), particularly in corporate finance advisory, capital raising, and M&A transactions. In addition, VCI is widely recognized for its strong research capability and premium client network within the Vietnamese capital market.

During the 2020–2025 period, Vietcap Securities recorded cyclical but generally positive financial performance, reflecting fluctuations in Vietnam’s stock market conditions. Revenue growth increased strongly in 2021 (+114.33%) thanks to booming market liquidity, before declining during 2022–2023 as investor sentiment weakened and trading activity slowed. However, the company recovered in 2024–2025 with revenue growth of 49.47% and 34.76%, respectively, supported by improving market conditions and stronger investment banking activities. Net Profit After Tax peaked at VND 1,499 billion in 2021 before declining during the market correction phase, then gradually recovered to VND 1,342 billion in 2025. ROEA and ROAA also fell from high levels in 2021, reflecting lower profitability during weaker market periods, although both indicators stabilized again afterward. EPS dropped sharply to VND 1,127/share in 2023 before recovering alongside the improvement of Vietnam’s capital market.

TIME HORIZON

MEDIUM TERM INVESTMENT HORIZON

As a leading stock in the securities industry, VCI tends to achieve sustainable growth alongside the upward cycle of the economy and financial market. Holding the stock during this period allows investors to benefit from both capital gains and stable annual cash dividends.

RISK TOLERANCE

MEDIUM TO HIGH RISK

VCI’s business performance depends heavily on stock market liquidity, capital market activity, and investment performance. In addition, proprietary trading and investment banking operations expose the company to market volatility and deal-flow risks. However, VCI’s strong institutional positioning and diversified revenue structure help partially reduce cyclical pressure. However, the company remains highly sensitive to stock market volatility, trading liquidity, interest rate movements, and increasing industry competition, all of which can significantly affect short-term performance. In addition, the growing involvement of commercial banks in the securities sector creates stronger competition, as many securities companies are now backed by large banking groups with strong capital support, increasing pressure on independent firms like SSI.
